Fund Performance

The September quarter was a positive period across major markets and assets classes, with strong performance from both shares and bonds. This translated well for 1980s option members by way of a strong absolute return over the period, largely driven by sizeable allocations to shares. Longer-term performance remains strong across most time horizons.

Investor sentiment was negatively affected mid-quarter due to a combination of weaker US economic indicators and monetary policy tightening in Japan, leading to market volatility. By quarter end however, the long anticipated start of rate cuts by US Federal Reserve in addition to stimulatory measures in China supported share markets, resulting in a strong outcome by the end of September. Developed markets delivered around 6.5% (in local currency terms), with value stocks and listed real assets proving to be the key drivers over the period. Emerging markets were similarly boosted by optimistic economic developments, particularly in Asia, generating positive performance after a relatively volatile couple of months. Domestically, Australian share allocation also followed suit of global markets, performing similarly over the quarter, with industrial, real estate and IT sectors recording strong gains.

Fixed income assets were also supported in the environment, as the global interest rate outlook continues to shift to an easing outlook into the near future with high yield credit allocations generating a positive return. Unlisted real assets and alternatives exposures' performance were somewhat constrained over the quarter amid mixed valuations.

The Option outperformed its CPI objective over the quarter and remains ahead for the year, following significant gains in shares and ongoing inflation. Over the long-term, despite an improvement in relative performance, performance remains mixed following volatile markets and above normal inflationary conditions in recent years.

Looking ahead, we anticipate the remainder of 2024 to be a reasonable year for returns, bolstered by easing inflation pressures, central banks moving to cut rates and prospects for stronger growth in 2025-2026. However, there remains a high risk of recession, geopolitical risks and possible delays to expected rate cuts. In this environment, we remain highly diversified across asset classes and strategies.

Market Review

The September quarter saw gains in most major asset classes as close to half of global central banks, including the US, UK and the Eurozone, began to cut rates. This came on the back of subdued, yet still positive economic growth and consistently falling inflation. With US inflation now close to the Fed's 2% target, an assertive rate cut from the Fed materialised late in the quarter to the tune of 50 basis points, along with firmer expectations of more to come. Monetary easing also continued outside of the US, notably in China, with more aggressive government stimulus expected to be applied in efforts to counter the nation's struggling property market.

War meanwhile unfortunately continued, both in Ukraine and Russia, and in the Middle East where fighting significantly escalated. While causing some volatility in the oil price, as is often the case, there wasn't much significant impact on investment markets.

Focus on the US election also intensified, with immigration, foreign policy (particularly with regard to global wars) and the economy being the major issues, along with two failed assassination attempts on Presidential candidate Trump occurring in July and September.
