Fund Performance

The Fund posted a healthy gain over the June quarter, rounding off an exceptionally strong performance over the full financial year. Most asset classes gained over the quarter, with domestic and international share markets delivering the strongest returns. Overall, the Fund continued to outperform both the benchmark and its CPI objective.

Markets moved higher over the quarter, due to supportive monetary and fiscal policy combined with continued economic recovery, which has been enabled by the accelerating inoculation effort across developed countries. Economic growth and manufacturing and service sector activity rose strongly. Against this backdrop, most share market sectors rallied. The S&P/ASX 200 index ended the quarter up 8.3% and the MSCI World ex Australia index closed 7.6% higher (in local currency terms). In line with broader share markets, listed property and infrastructure saw meaningful gains as interest rates were largely range bound following assurances from the US Federal Reserve that any monetary policy tightening is unlikely over the near term. Unlisted assets, particularly private equity, also generated positive returns as revaluations rose. As the economic outlook improved, defensive assets such as bonds and investment-grade credit, moved largely sideways.

The Fund's outperformance over the quarter was largely driven by its sizable allocations to Australian shares and listed real assets. Its allocations to private equity and absolute return strategies also added to outperformance, largely due to strong revaluations. Its allocations to fixed income assets were broadly in line with respective benchmarks. Pleasingly, its allocation to diversified credit maintained its strong outperformance as investor sentiment continued to show signs of improvement.

Market Review

The economic backdrop became more complicated as the quarter progressed. Uncertainty over the persistency of inflationary pressures, ongoing stimulus packages, more hawkish than expected US Federal Reserve communications, and stretched valuations in many areas, all resulted in a more heterogeneous market interpretation of future economic direction and an increasingly fluid risk on/ risk off bias. In addition, there remain some unresolved global supply-demand mismatches. The G7 meeting in Cornwall concluded with communications regarding the equalisation of global taxes but there is long way to go before anything concrete can be agreed on an international basis. The meeting also laid bare the West's increasingly fractious relationship with China. However, this year's summit was generally considered to be more positive than recent ones under the Trump administration, which should augur well for increased global cohesion, especially amongst developed democracies. Strong US demand is coming up against some supply-demand mismatches and bottlenecks which are also boosting market fears of inflation. However, the US Federal Reserve is playing down inflationary risks, citing they are transitory, which is currently assuaging markets. Despite this, investors will be watching how the combined effect of ongoing stimulus programmes, married to disrupted and possible structural changes to some supply chains, may ultimately impact the longer-term inflationary environment.

Outlook

Looking ahead, we remain optimistic. As the COVID-19 vaccine rollout continues to gain pace and economic growth follows, we believe the recovery theme, of governments supporting economies and reopening momentum, will remain the main drivers of growth. Against this backdrop, we look favourably upon shares relative to fixed income. However, the emergence of new COVID-19 variants and inflationary concerns has left markets somewhat susceptible to a correction. Maintaining an active, well-diversified asset exposure should continue to aid portfolio resilience. We hold a broadly neutral position across most asset classes with minor tilts into shares. The Fund continues to hold primarily shares and listed real assets while also holding a small exposure to alternatives for additional diversification.
