

Balanced Index

Quarterly Investment Option Update

31 December 2021

Aim and Strategy

The strategy aims to closely match the index returns of asset classes before fees and taxes, with a bias towards growth assets (shares and property) but also holding exposure to defensive assets (cash and bonds). Exposure to individual asset classes will be attained through the use of low cost index-focused investment managers. Global shares may be partially or fully hedged back to Australian dollars. The option's target asset allocation will be adjusted on a regular basis, within disclosed ranges, to reflect the average asset allocation of relevant peers. The option's benchmark is also adjusted on a regular basis in line with the target asset allocation.

Market Review

The December quarter saw investor sentiment remain generally buoyant, reflected in global equity markets climbing to new highs towards year-end, as markets began to accept high inflation as a prevailing condition, rather than a transient concern, while the world continued its long-winded road towards exiting the COVID-19 pandemic. US inflation was shown to be at 6.8% over the year to November, the highest seen in 39 years, with many other countries also reaching multi-year peaks. Indeed, the rhetoric of the US Federal Reserve (Fed) took a notable, slightly hawkish turn in this regard, with Chair Jerome Powell, indicating a clear preference to speed up the withdrawal of bond purchases given current inflationary pressures that Powell believes will remain "well into next year."

Outside of finance, the broader media focus was on the latest COVID-19 variant, Omicron. While raw case numbers rapidly rose to new peaks towards the end of the quarter, numerous studies have now shown Omicron symptoms to be generally relatively mild in nature (despite being considerably more infectious), with fatality and hospitalisation percentage rates far below that of previous variants. As has been the case for some time however, global governments reacted vastly differently across the globe, heavily impacting confidence, trade, travel and adding to civil discontent.
